

Call for Nominations for the
2023 ISEE Andrew Light Award for Public Philosophy

Nominations due by November 10, 2023

Each year, the International Society for Environmental Ethics offers an award to promote work in public philosophy and honor contributions to the field by Dr. Andrew Light, who received the inaugural award at our 2017 annual summer meeting.

With this call, ISEE seeks nominations for the 2023 Andrew Light Award for Public Philosophy. We strive to recognize public philosophers working in environmental ethics and philosophy, broadly construed. We seek nominees who are helping to broaden the reach of environmental philosophy, and whose teaching, research, or service involve engagement and interaction with broader publics. This may be exemplified in published work or engagement in environmental issues of public importance.

The award is open scholars at any stage of career and may honor a singular work or engagement of importance, or a longer pattern of involvement over a career. It is important to note that early career scholars are viable candidates and their nominations are encouraged. Self-nominations are welcome.

Nominations should include:

- a) A letter of nomination, listing the name, affiliation (if any), and contact information of both the nominee and nominator. The letter should explain how and why the nominee qualifies for the award;
- b) The nominee's curriculum vitae or professional resume.

Nominations may also include:

- c) Descriptions and representative samples of work in public philosophy, such as op-eds, public presentations, descriptions of philosophically-driven civic interactions, or alternative media engagements (blogs, videos, podcasts, etc.) or work about the public importance of environmental philosophy in professional journals;
- d) Additional letters of endorsement for the nomination, no more than two.

Nominations assembling these materials into one Adobe Acrobat PDF file are strongly preferred. Nominations previously submitted for the 2022 Award may be reactivated. Please contact us, as below.

Nominations are due by Friday, November 10, 2023. Please send nominations to ISEE President Marion Hourdequin via email (mhourdequin@coloradocollege.edu) with the subject line 2023 ISEE Light Award Nomination. The winner will be announced in January 2024.